CHEESE IT, COPS!

SYLVESTER'S FIST
HITS HALLOWEEN

Small Boys Post Look-outs or They'll Land in Lockups.

Forgetting the days when they were boys, the police will put the kibosh on the youths who endeavor to celebrate Halloween this year in the regular and approved fashion. Flour throwing, tick-tacks, dead cats on door steps, and other pranks have been tabooed, and about the only thing to do this Halloween is to stay home and bob for apples or look for hobgoblins under the sink in the kitchen.

Major Sylvester, superintendent of police, will issue the following order to the captains of the different precincts this afternoon:

"Order your shifting section on duty October 31 at 6 p. m., and have your reserve co-operate with the officers on the street for an hour or two in giving attention to the pranks of boys, especially those of older years, in order that persons may be free from insult and property from damage or destruction.

"The wheelmen, especially in the suburban districts, should be active in keeping down complaints.

"Boys who fail to appreciate the warning given them should be taken to their parents, but those of older years, and any who are guilty of flagrant violations of law, should be sent to the House of Detention.

"The throwing of flour and other indignities will not be permitted."

Furthermore, the police will be instructed to rigidly enforce the order, and if any boys are caught carrying away gates, lamp posts, or horse blocks, it's the station house for them."

It isn't the boys who will get you this Halloween; it's a policeman. Look out for the blue coat and brass buttons. They mean trouble for the small boy.

from the National Theater, where the Marine Band, led by Lieut. William Santelmann, rendered a most glorious symphony concert, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary Society of the Washington Hebrew Congregation. The funds will go to the sinking fund of their temple, on Eighth street.

Seal; "The Blessing of the Daggers," from "The Huguenots," Meyerbeer; "Hale solo, 'Fantasia on Theme by Chopin,' D-musserman; "Vienna Blood," Strauss; paraphrase, "Loreley," Neavada; sextet from "Lucia," Donizetti, played by A. S. Whitcomb, H. Windelett, O. J. May, G. O. Frey, H. A. Stone, and Louis M. Kruger; "Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 2," Liszt, and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Mrs. H. Oppenheimer and niece, Mrs. David Goldsmith, have returned from a fortnight's stay with relatives in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Stern have taken an apartment at the Ashley, and will be located there in the near future.

Arthur and Lester Neuman have had as their guests Nelson Berliner, Leonard Engel, and Felix Erlanger, of Baltimore.

The ladies of the Mercantile Club held their first whist of the season Saturday evening, in the parlors of the clubhouse, when the prize winners were Mrs. Max Goldsmith and Mrs. Samuel Rothschild.

Monroe Hollander will celebrate his twenty-first birthday anniversary this evening with a stag dinner at Steinberger's.

The semi-monthly charity whist will take place this afternoon at the Mercantile Club.

MAID SAVES

AGED WOMAN
FROM ROBBER

Intruder Had Wealthy Widow by Throat. Used Her Fists.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Lawrence I. Bodkin, seventy years old, and the widow of a wealthy Brooklyn coal merchant, was attacked today in her home at 1321 Bedford avenue by a masked robber. But for the quick wit and ready aid of a maid, who was awakened by her screams, she would have been killed.

Mrs. Bodkin was aroused early this morning by some one entering her room. Looking about she saw a man wearing a black mask climbing in through the dumb waiter shaft. He carried a pistol in his hand, and seizing the aged woman by the throat, he demanded her jewels.

"If you raise an outcry I will kill you," he threatened.

Despite the threat, Mrs. Bodkin screamed for help. Her cry was heard by her maid, Hilda Waters, who rushed into the room.

Angered by the sight of her old mistress lying prostrate on the bed, with the robber bending over, the maid rushed at him and began to beat him with her fists. Taken by surprise the man fled from the room, leaving his revolver.

The police were immediately notified and a search is being made for the robber.
